THE TURF.

TROTTING AT THE UNION COURSE.

The match between the rivals, George M. Patchen, Jr., and Commodore Vanderbilt, just now the most prominent stallions on the trotting turf, came off yesterday at the Union Course. The weather, though agreeable, still all the day looked threateningly with its clouds and east wind. The race was decided quite a certainty in sporting circles, as the odds were two to one on Patchen. Those causes, the doubtful weather, and the opinion as to the result, acted to draw the bettors and prevent attendance. In consequence, there were but few numbers on the course, and those were mainly its early shareholders. The means of reaching the Union Course are, those going by public conveyance, defective and slow, occupying nearly two hours in the transit. But few men of the number of bettors could afford their own turnouts or horses from their livery. There were no incidents of the road to please, excite or annoy—no game comforts, and little time to occupy.

The result of the race was booked to be so great a certainty that for some time the odds have been three to one in favor of Patchen. On the second yesterday, before starting the race, the amount of $100 on Patchen, $40 on the Commodore, and $100 on the Union Course, closed up. But Patchen was soon down again, and at last was drew away a couple of lengths, finishing the race in a way that made it a dead heat. And halping Patchen the pace quickened, and at midway of the stretch carried the brown stallion off his feet. This was the Commodore's opportunity, and he rushed to the front with a will.

Having got it, Pifer hurried him a little too much and he flew off. By the time he was galloping, Patchen had got back to his tree, and dashed off with a powerful stroke of his hind legs, overtaking on this decided lead to the half mile mark and took the curve easily. Pifer taking advantage of the slackened pace, footed up to within three lengths of his leader, but the Commodore had reached the finish of the stretch home. In going of the curve in to straight work, Lovett, who swung his horse wide and drove Patchen far from the line. Pifer adiposely avoided the fault, and dashed on, and gained it, and then drew strongly on the brown stallion with a tremendous rush. Both settled into good square trotting, and rattled up the home stretch at a good trot. The Commodore had the lead, but steadily gained it, and steadily gained during its whole length, and catching on the mark, the pair made a dead heat of it in 23.4

The heat over, there was no change of the betting, and to 30 to 10 on the Commodore.

Heat and Heat.—Both horses cooled off well, and came up fresh. Then ensued a most extraordinary scene! Pifer and Lovett amused themselves by scoring 21 times before they got off. They accomplished nothing else, they of course, and then their horses, too, became fatigued, disengaged the throng of on-lookers. When all patience was exhausted, and the horses also, they got away for the second heat. Vanderbilt on the inside took the lead. On going off Pifer, with the inside, took a hard strike, but recovered in a few yards. Both went round the track in a dead heat, when again Patchen went up, and Vanderbilt drew ahead six or eight lengths, in a flash, and increased the gap to ten in the quarter pole. Patchen got down to his own gait, and was soon off again, and was soon after behind badly all the way along the back stretch. Though not breaking, he was slipping constantly, and with the least press on him would have broken. He looked amazingly at the half-mile pole, like his King. The heat of both pairs was now on, and but for the start, the Commodore had won four games. (We print the game in full, though the first 12 moves were given in yesterday's paper.—ED.)
